

CLOSE VOTE IN THE HOUSE

ON BILL REGULATING APPOINTMENT OF PROSECUTING AGENTS.

Will be Appointed by Superior Court Judges—Consolidated Railroad Debiture Certificates—Several Unfavorable Reports from Committees.

Hartford, May 9.—There was an interesting discussion in the senate this afternoon over the bill concerning the debiture certificates of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and their conversion into the stock of the company. The bill is as follows:

Section 1.—That at any time when the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, having outstanding contracts entitling the holders to future delivery of shares of its capital stock, under the provisions of the amendments of its charter passed by the general assembly in 1889 and 1890, makes an additional issue of its shares for any purpose except for exchange for the capital stock or the obligations of leased lines, it shall offer to the holders of said contracts respectively the right to subscribe for additional contracts maturing at the same time, and in the same ratio that new stock may be offered to its stockholders, and at the same price, but not less than par.

Section 2.—Such offer may be made to holders of outstanding contracts, whose names and addresses are not registered on the books of said company, by advertisement once a week in one or more newspapers published in this state and in the city of New York, in the state of New York, and in the city of Boston, in the commonwealth of Massachusetts, for at least thirty days prior to the time fixed for making such subscription.

Section 3.—The directors of said company, may sell for the benefit of said company, at not less than their par value, rights to make the subscriptions herein provided not taken by holders of outstanding contracts.

When the bill was advocated before the railroad committee ex-Governor Bulkeley, president of the Aetna Life Insurance company, spoke earnestly for its passage. He said that the Consolidated road said they would not oppose it, and the committee reported unanimously in favor. When the discussion opened in the senate this afternoon Senator Chapman said:

"These debiture bonds are notes of the company, and I do not believe these debiture holders should partake of these benefits without sharing in the drawbacks as well. Should the stock of the road go down these holders of the debitures would not care to invest in the stock."

Senator Douglass—The option to take the debitures was given to all of the stockholders, and if some did not avail of it that is their lookout. If they are now on the wrong side of the market in the transaction that is their lookout. Everyone of the holders of the debitures has the option to take the stock of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, and I don't believe there was ever a time that the stock of that road has not been disposed of to the old stockholders, when it has been for disposal. Whenever there has been any mention to cut the management has allowed the stockholders to share, and that is the way it should be; they should be given an option of taking new stock. I am in favor of a fair distribution, and am not willing to leave out the holders of the debitures. It is a very fair proposition and the bill should pass.

Senator Werner—The stockholders have paid for their debitures, and it is manifestly just that they should be allowed to subscribe for new stock.

The bill then passed almost unanimously.

THE BALLOT LAWS.

Just before adjournment this afternoon an adverse report was made on the Myers' ballot machine proposition. Representative Judson of Stratford said his committee would also report unfavorably on the Australian ballot bill and several other ballot bills, and report a general law on the subject.

OTHER COMMITTEE REPORTS.

An unfavorable report was made in the house on the bill providing for guard rails for electric roads. Also on the bill providing for reprinting old state reports. Representative Judson said it would cost about $10,000 to do this work, and while it might be ordered sometime the condition of the state finances would not warrant it at present.

An unfavorable report was made on the bill prohibiting street railways for obstructing the sidewalk with awnings. It was explained that the selectmen of towns had the power to regulate the matter, and the bill was rejected.

An unfavorable report was made on the bill concerning the enforcing of collection of damages from railroad companies, and the bill was rejected.

An unfavorable report was made on the bill providing for the sale of six tickets for twenty-five cents on the street railways of New Haven and for transfer from one line to another, and the bill was rejected.

Favorable reports were made on the amendment to the charter of the New Haven Street Railway company allowing the company to extend its tracks from East Haven green to Short Beach and Mansfield Grove, also in favor of the charter for the Milford Street Railway company. Those who are named in the charter are Charles A. Tomlinson, D. R. Merwin, George M. Gunn, Frederick L. Tibbals, C. W. Beardsley, George H. Ford and William B. Stoddard. The line is to run from the Naugatuck Junction to Meadow's End, Burns' Point and to other parts of Milford, including the Milford depot, also the amendment to the Winchester Avenue Railroad company to allow the company to put tracks in Read, Newhall and Pine streets in Camden; from Howard avenue and Washington street in New Haven, through Howard avenue to Portsea, street and thence to Washington street; from Sylvan avenue and Winthrop avenue, through Winthrop avenue to Oak Street; also for the extension of its line in the town of Orange, through First avenue, from White street to Monahan place; also in Campbell avenue, from the Derby railroad track to Ward's corner; also on petition of the New Haven street railway to build another track through Church street in New Haven; a Lake Whitney; also from the main line to East Rock and to the summit, provided that the park commissioners approve the layout.

Also amending the charter of the West Shore Railway company, giving authority to extend the tracks from Woodmont to the railway station at that place and also to Long Island sound at a point in Woodmont, the provision being that these extensions shall not be made until consent of the selectmen of Milford is obtained.

PROSECUTING AGENTS.

The order of the day in the house was the bill providing for the appointment of liquor prosecuting agents of Connecticut by the superior court instead of by the county commissioners. The bill, reported unanimously by the judiciary committee, contains the following:

"The judges of the superior court, at their annual meeting in the year 1895, and annually thereafter, shall appoint one or more persons residing in each county to be prosecuting agents, whose duty it shall be diligently to inquire into and prosecute all violations of the laws relating to the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors, who shall have and exercise in any town or city in said county the powers of grand jurors or prosecuting officers in all prosecutions for such violations, and may conduct such prosecutions personally or by attorney. Said prosecuting agents shall render such aid in all prosecutions for violation of the provisions of this chapter tried in the superior court, and shall give such information in reference thereto as the state's attorney of said county may require. They shall render monthly reports of their doings to the county commissioners. No person engaged in the sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors shall be appointed as such prosecuting agent."

"The judges may remove any of said prosecuting agents at their discretion and appoint others in their stead."

Representative Judson of Stratford led off in a long speech in favor of the bill.

Representative Gunn of Milford also favored the bill. He said:

"I am heartily in favor of this bill. I believe it will prevent many people from getting wrong ideas of prosecutions under the liquor law. The liquor laws are violated from one end of the state to the other. Why do not these agents do their duty? It is for the nasty piousness politics there is in it that prevents him from doing his duty. There is a law that a man who sells without a license is on the second and third offense imprisoned and fined. How many of the resorts along the shore had a license last year? When has a second prosecution been brought and imprisonment imposed? They are brought up perhaps four times in the summer and fined, but it is never alleged that it is the second or third offense. They just launch at this enforcement of the law. This practice would not exist."

Mr. Newton of New Haven—New Haven has about one-fifth of the liquor saloons of the state. I dislike just as the republicans have come in to see this appointing power going over. I was always in favor of dividing the court in New Haven into two parts, one for the democrats, but I am not in favor of giving the democrats the biggest share. I believe this will provide for a more regular enforcement of the law. The character of the prosecutions will stand higher. What the effect on politics will be I don't know. I shall vote for the bill."

Representative Hall of Monroe—We have a board of county commissioners whose duties are fixed by law. If you give this power of appointment to the superior court you are dividing the responsibilities. If the judges of the superior court have the power of appointing these agents they must take them from the same locality and these judges do not know these men so well as the county commissioners. It is the duty of the commissioners to appoint good men and I believe in most cases they make such appointments. But corruption may exist here and there and yet these men must be taken from the same place.

"Who are some of these men who have received these appointments? They are such men as Hugh Bailey and William S. Fowler of New Haven; G. R. C. Giddings of Bridgeport; Wellington B. Smith, a member of this house; W. S. Downs of Derby and Dwight Tuttle of East Haven. Are not these good and reputable citizens? Sustain the men you have selected for these offices, unless you can give some good reason for it."

Mr. Range of Guilford moved the previous question and the vote was taken by rising. Before those voting were counted, the speaker declared the vote not carried, as it would have resulted in adjourning the house, the vote showing a lack of a quorum.

The discussion lasted for two and one-half hours and at last the previous question was ordered and the bill was passed by a vote of 89 to 10.

Representative Gunn moved a reconsideration of the vote, so that it could not be made next Tuesday and the house refused; so the matter goes to the senate.

GRADE CROSSING EXPENSES.

The senate to-day passed an important bill which provides that "sums of money assessed by any orders of the railroad commissioners of the superior court upon appeal from such orders, against any town or city in this state, where the applications were brought by any railroad company, or the directors thereof, since May 1, 1884, for the removal of grade crossings by the alterations of any highway, or highways, or otherwise, in the cases of such highways as were in existence before the construction of the railroad, shall be reimbursed by the state to such towns or cities entitled to reimbursement under the provisions of this act, shall present their claims to the comptroller, and proofs and proper certificates, to his satisfaction, from the board of railroad commissioners; and the comptroller shall thereupon draw his order on the treasurer in favor of such towns or cities, respectively, for the amounts to which he shall find the towns or cities to be entitled under the provisions of this act."

How much money will be taken from the treasury of the state is not known, but it is said the amount will be not far short of $500,000.

HERE AND THERE.

The bill allowing J. D. Brown and others of Bridgeport to build an electric road in Milford was rejected.

The senate appropriated $7,000 for defraying the expenses of a suitable exhibit at the Atlanta exposition. Both branches of the general assembly adjourned until Tuesday at 12:30 p. m.

CRADLE COMMENT.

Frank M. Dooley, the well known Fair Haven grocer, was presented with a bouncing boy by his wife Wednesday. Mother and child are doing well.

FAIR HAVEN.

Some time ago it was rumored that a French cooking class had been organized among "the grown up men" of the Grand avenue Congregational church, and now tickets to a dinner to be given by them May 15 are on sale at Salisbury's drug store. Evidently there is something in it. If people have the courage to go the doctors are looking for a big run of trade. No food is to be served to which any lady has ever put her hand.

The bridge on Grand avenue, over the Quinnipiac river, which has been undergoing repairs, is so far completed that the electric cars began yesterday to run across the bridge. The Norton street cars, which have been running down East Pearl street, thus reducing the service across the river to twenty minutes, have ceased the run down East Pearl street, running over Grand avenue as formerly, once more giving the people of the annex the six minute service, the deprivation of which has been very much felt. Two cars have now been put on East Chapel street, and the run is extended from Ferry street to Grand avenue.

Charles Homan of the annex is to be in charge of the photograph gallery at Fawcett park on and after July 1. He was there last summer.

Members of Perseverance council, D. of L., formed themselves into two companies during the winter for the purpose of giving entertainments from January 1 to April 1, the company scoring the least number of points to entertain the winning company with a supper. According to the contract Company A had a fine supper spread for the winners. Company B on Tuesday evening. Supper was served after the regular meeting of the council.

The two wings of the old Grand avenue school house, recently torn down, were built in 1844 by John Dibble, when it was desired to enlarge the school.

Lila Humiston of 67 Houston street gave a pink tea to a few of her young friends on Wednesday afternoon, the occasion being the celebration of her twelfth birthday anniversary. After tea the young people enjoyed games, and were entertained by one of their number, Miss Edith Barr, who gave two of her pleasing selections, "How Girls Play" and "Little Miss Chrysanthemum." Souvenirs of the day were carried home by each guest in the shape of a dainty crepe paper basket filled with pink bonbons. The hostess was remembered with flowers and other gifts. Among those present were Edna Augur, Edna Mansfield, Jessie Norton, Jennie Fleury, May Rowe, Lottie Bishop, Josephine Hemmingsway, Eleanor Kennedy, Edith Barr, Maud and Sadie Tuttle, Ruth Wilson and Ralph Darrow.

The proposed electric extension to be built by the Fair Haven and Westville Railroad company, starting from Ferry street through Middletown avenue, to Montross and North Haven, is looked upon with favor in this section. It would undoubtedly prove a great benefit to the section which it will reach. The selectmen have voted not to oppose the scheme, and the legislature will undoubtedly grant the charter.

H. Sherman of Shelter street is acting as secretary for Golden Hours Corresponding club of the city, of which Charles Plummer of 118 St. John street is president.

Silver Wedding.

Brantford, May 9.—On the evening of the sixth Mr. and Mrs. Osborn of Brantford were quite successfully and agreeably surprised by a large circle of relatives and friends, who assembled to congratulate them on the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Osborn have been residents of Brantford for many years and are quite well known to everyone and the merited esteem in which they stand was shown by the large number of people present.

It was quite pleasing to see the bride of twenty-five years ago appear in dress worn at her first nuptials with the groom at her side as attentive as of years ago. After lots of reminiscences and old time stories had been discussed and pleasure seemed to be at the height one of the gentlemen present made a few remarks fitting to the occasion and presented the bridal couple with many pretty and useful presents, extending to the bride the name of those present that they might journey on another quarter of a century and all meet again.

A bountiful collation was served, consisting of twenty-five different kinds of cake, ice cream, lemonade, etc.

GOING THE ROUNDS AGAIN.

This is the third time the Burglars Have Visited Colchester.

Colchester, May 9.—Members of the safe breaking gang paid Colchester a visit yesterday morning. They forced an entrance into Edward L. Strong's grist mill, bored a hole in the door of the safe and used some powerful explosive that tore off one door, completely ruining the combination. The depot was also visited, and here, too, the door was blown off. The explosive were heard by several persons, and all say that they were simultaneous, which gives rise to the theory that the gang must have divided and that the third party was on the lookout for both places, as they are only a few rods apart. Agent Van Horn has kept no money in the depot safe since the burglary last fall, consequently the thieves gained no plunder. Mr. Strong had $4 or $5 in small change in his safe, which was taken. This makes the third time the Colchester depot has been entered by burglars within a year.

Judge Penn Improving.

Winsted, May 9.—Judge Penn gets down town about every day, and is practically his own self again. The doctors, however, advise him to rest for a time. His eyes still trouble him, but are getting stronger.

Will Lecture in North Haven.

There is considerable interest over the lecture next Monday evening by Captain D. A. Thomas of this city. It is entitled, "A Tour in the Heavens, or the Experience of an Amateur in thirty-four Balloon Voyages." It is to be given in Memorial hall and for the benefit of the Veteran Soldiers' association. Our citizens hold a grateful remembrance for our war veterans and will no doubt give them substantial aid by filling Memorial hall Monday evening.

NEW BOOKS.

COLLEGE-BRED RUTH. By Elton Burroughs. Published by the New York Recorder company.

This entertaining novel by a former New Haven boy, now of the editorial staff of the New York Recorder, gives the history of the development of a young girl in moderate circumstances, a New York society leader. She passes through some most astonishing adventures, but the interest is well sustained throughout. The story is of special interest to New Haven readers, as the coloring of a large part of the story is entirely local. Ruth is introduced as a young girl living on the shores of Lake Whitney with her Aunt Louisa, who is represented as a good-natured motherly person, but rather inclined to let her young ward have a good deal her own way. Ruth at the opening of the story does not care for much of anything but her pony and outdoor life. She reads a French novel and soon after becomes acquainted with a select coterie of Yale students, and from that time her development proceeds with remarkable rapidity. She takes in all the big Yale events, such as the boat race at New London and the football games, where she is a reigning belle among her student admirers. She also grows fond of Saturday afternoon matinees, where she meets some other girls who are popular among the collegians. She finds them real nice girls and she quickly learns the recipe of a good time as far as it was possible to be had in the sleepy old university town. After a summer at a shore resort she returns to her home and decides that New Haven is too small for them and they are next seen in a flat in New York. Ruth's excuse is the culture of her voice, but in her thirst for adventure and experience she appears on the stage of a theater in the chorus of an opera comique. She does not like that, however. But the evening she was on the stage an old man named John Hardman sees her and becomes her ardent admirer. He finally induces her to come to a flat which he had furnished for her in an elegant manner, and attempts to make love to her. At this point is one of the dramatic denouements of the story. Her lover finds that she is his daughter, whom he had supposed was with Aunt Louisa up on the shores of Lake Whitney.

She had been for a long time infatuated with Mortimer Belmont, a judge of the supreme court of New York. To be nearer him she marries his brother, a weakling. By her charms and personal magnetism she finally draws the judge himself away from the path of duty, and induces him to desert his family. They live together for a time in seclusion until at last he comes to his senses and goes back to his own wife. Ruth, when she finds herself deserted by her lover, takes herself and is saved at the last moment and is welcomed back to the arms of her husband. She now has learned the true philosophy of life in New York high society and settles down to a life filled with the petty intrigues of life in society—a typical society woman.

The main action of the story is well developed, but some of the minor threads are rather loosely drawn and seem to be out of place. The recognition of father and daughter reminds one of an exactly similar scene in "Alice, or the Mystery," by Bulwer Lytton, where Mr. Maltravers finds that Miss Cameron is his daughter. The character of Ruth before she actually becomes a society leader is actually a bit of an enigma. And the author does not enlighten us. Perhaps he does not know himself. Her career in New Haven seems to be swift, but whether or not she belongs to that class of girls which is rather demi-monde it is hard to decide. The final outcome of her character, however, is apparent enough.

Remanded for Sentence.

New York, May 9.—Samuel Aymar, the defaulting bookkeeper of the National Shoe and Leather bank, who embezzled $20,000 belonging to that institution, pleaded guilty this forenoon before Judge Benedict in the United States circuit court. He was remanded for sentence.

He Was Assassinated.

Boston, May 9.—A letter received by a gentleman in this city from a friend in Cuba says in substance that Cronberta, the insurgent leader, who was reported to have been killed in battle, was in fact assassinated while depending on the protection of a Spanish flag of truce under which he was conferring with the government officers.

Candidate for Street Superintendent.

THE YALE LIBRARY.

Its History and Connection With Yale's Growth.

Since the Yale library has now grown to such an extensive size, and so little is generally known as to the relative value of the collections which it contains, this sketch of its progress from 1714 to 1894, has been prepared. The history of the library is one of active growth and progress from the very beginning of the college, when $30 was presented by the founders to start a collection of books, up to the present time.

The real date of the beginning of the library may be put at 1714, when a collection of books about 700 in number was sent over from England by Jeremiah Drummer, all of which were his gift, or given as the result of his solicitation. When the college moved to New Haven the number of books was at once more than doubled by a gift of 1,000 volumes from Bishop Berkeley. These were presented in 1721, and the library received no such large gift again for almost a hundred years. The first catalogue was published by President Clappin, 1745, and the number of volumes was estimated at about 2,600. It was not until 1763 that any money was presented toward a permanent fund for the increase of the library. In this year the Rev. Jared Eliot gave $400, and the fund from that time on grew rapidly until in 1830 it amounted to $13,000. In 1875 to $45,000, and in 1894 to almost $100,000.

It is impossible to mention in detail all the gifts which the library has received both in money and books, but it is safe to say that its most munificent benefactor was Professor Salisbury, who presented, in addition to his large and valuable collection of Oriental books and manuscripts, the sum of $5,000 to enlarge it. No other department of the library approaches this in value or completion.

In addition to this gift of Professor Salisbury, the library contains the following notable collections: Three thousand volumes of Chinese literature, which include a very valuable and complete series of the dynastic histories in 217 volumes; 3,000 volumes of Japanese literature; 1,850 volumes on Congressional History and Polity, and the History of the Pilgrims; 3,000 volumes of Russian literature; 5,800 plays of the French drama. Collections in the following subjects should also be mentioned as being almost complete: American History, American Genealogy, United States Congressional documents, Meteorology.

The Brothers and Lionel Libraries, which were built up by the efforts of the students to provide for themselves what the college used to be too poor to furnish—a good collection of books in general literature—were founded about 1770. Each had about 15,000 books in 1870. In 1871, by a vote of the two societies, the libraries were placed under the control of the college library committee, with the understanding that they should be united, a means recommended both from reasons of economy and convenience. This union was completed in 1872; all duplicates were sold, and this reduced the number of books to about 17,000.

An idea as to the average growth of the library year by year, may be gained from the fact that in 1893 there were added 3,350 volumes by purchase, and 2,300 books and 5,700 pamphlets by gift; also to the Lionel Brothers Library by purchase, 790 volumes, making a total increase of 4,440 volumes and 5,700 pamphlets for that year.

The phenomenal growth of the library has kept pace with Yale's prestige as an educational institution, and affords promise of still greater results for the future.

MISS PARDEE'S NEW PLAY.

"Bobby Melville" to Receive Its Initial Production To-night.

The play "Bobby Melville of London," written by Miss Jean Pardee, the author of "The Yale Man Up to Date," is booked for its initial performance at the Hyperion theater this evening, with a second production to-morrow night, the 11th, and a special matinee to-morrow afternoon. The curtain will rise at the evening performance at 8:30 o'clock and at the matinee at 2:30 o'clock. This change in time will be much appreciated by the theater-goers of this city. The greatest interest is felt by every one in Bobby's debut. The play is a four-act society comedy with the plot laid in London and at Maplewood, Warwickshire. It is a straight comedy, but with, with any amount of action from start to finish. The play has been read by competent critics in New York and pronounced good. There is a rumor afloat in New Haven that a well known New York manager has offered Miss Pardee $5,000 for it. Miss Pardee herself will assume the leading part of Lady Hargrave, while the leading man is Tilton Bryce, formerly of New Haven, whose work on the professional stage has been in such companies as Thomas Q. Seabrooke's and Sadie Martinot's. In Miss Martinot's company he played the juvenile part of Algy Grey, scoring a decided hit all through the south and west. He is an unusually handsome fellow, with a delightful voice and good stage presence.

Miss Pardee has taken every precaution to make the production of "Bobby Melville of London" as professional as possible. The Elvas Costuming company of New York, together with Dosion, also of New York, has had the costuming in charge. Charles Myers of New York will furnish wigs and make-up, with a competent man from his establishment sent up for the three performances. The matinee is given especially for the benefit of those from out of town who are anxious to see the play. The sale of seats opened at the box office on Monday. From all over the state orders have been pouring in for the matinee, while New Haven has signified its intention of turning out en masse for the evening performances.

A dance in the third act by Miss Pardee, dressed as "Bobby Melville of London" and Miss Frances Ross is destined to make a tremendous hit. Miss Ross is one of the most beautiful dancers either on or off the professional stage, and this hunt dance which they will do together is a combination of beautiful steps and graceful poses. "Bobby Melville" following so close upon the heels of "The Yale Man Up to Date," must indeed reap honors for the author of his being. All who can arrange to see Miss Pardee and her play should do so, for it will prove one of the season's events.
